I believe that the United States should keep the Morse testing requirement for General and Extra class licenses. It is a good emergency mode of communication when there is a lot of signal noise.